Polio did not put a brake on my life

By Ayuba Burki Gufwan, a polio survivor and founder/director of Beautiful Gate Handicapped People Center in Plateau State, Nigeria. Launched in 1999, Beautiful Gate has built and distributed more than 6,000 tricycle-type wheelchairs to polio survivors in Nigeria and neighboring states.

I was born in a tiny village in Plateau State, Nigeria. My mother had lost two babies before I was born, so when I came along everyone was very excited. I still remember faintly playing around with other kids. At the age of five, I came down with polio. I don't know what happened or how I lost my legs. Even to this day, it is not accepted in my family that it was polio. My mother thought that some evil men had bewitched me. In Nigeria as a whole, a lot of people don't see polio as a medical condition.

My father was told that some Americans had come to set up a hospital where they could restore the legs of handicapped children and he took me there to have me enrolled for this healing program. They enrolled me in school. After three years, he came back and asked "when is my child going to walk." They told him, oh no, we can't do anything about him walking, but we will keep him in school. When he heard that, he was discouraged and disappointed and he took me back from them because he considered it a waste of money to send a handicapped child to school. But at the age of 19, my uncle built a tricycle wheelchair. That was a turning point in my life because it restored my hope, my dignity, and put me on the path of progress once again. I went back to school and completed primary and secondary school. I couldn't get into law school right away, so I attended a teacher's college and earned a teaching position. That same year, I got into law school and trained as a lawyer. In college, some of my lectures were on the fourth floor. There were no elevators and no ramps. I had to park my wheelchair and crawl on my hands. Sometimes the facilities were overcrowded and you needed to be fit to work your way inside. People would enter through the windows. As a result, there were courses I was never able to attend.

That changed my entire orientation. Previously I had thought I would be an advocate for the disabled. But I discovered that the number one need of all people crawling on the ground was to have mobility. This is the foundation upon which you can build any kind of rehabilitation effort.

I met Dr. Ron Rice, a retired American pastor, at a workshop for educators in 1999 and he took an interest in me. He helped me raise funds for Beautiful Gate. At that time, there were just two of us making wheelchairs from whatever parts we could get, but with his help, we grew. Then in 2009, Rotary members came to Nigeria on a National Immunization Day and visited my shop. We eventually put together a pair of grants from The Rotary Foundation that involved 24 clubs on five continents and we were greatly able to expand.

In Africa every name has a meaning otherwise it is not a name. The name Burki means to apply the brake. It was given to me when I contracted polio. They said "this boy would have been a great child but this polio has put a brake on his success." Whatever task I was given, I put double effort into because I wanted to prove them wrong. The name motivated me to work harder to prove a point that polio did not put a brake on my life.

Just as important is the assurance of knowing your loved ones will be spared from the rigors of making your arrangements after you're gone. Planning will protect them from emotional overspending and the potential for family feuding. It would be unfair to let your survivors experience the helpless feeling of not knowing what to do during this very vulnerable and stressful time. You can contact John Kenny @ 727-743-1329

“Criticism may not be agreeable, but it is necessary. It fulfills the same function as pain in the human body. It calls attention to an unhealthy state of things.”
